

Case Study - in-house consulting services at a discrete manufacturer in USA

Improving in-house consulting services for supply chain networks with 4flow vista®

Background

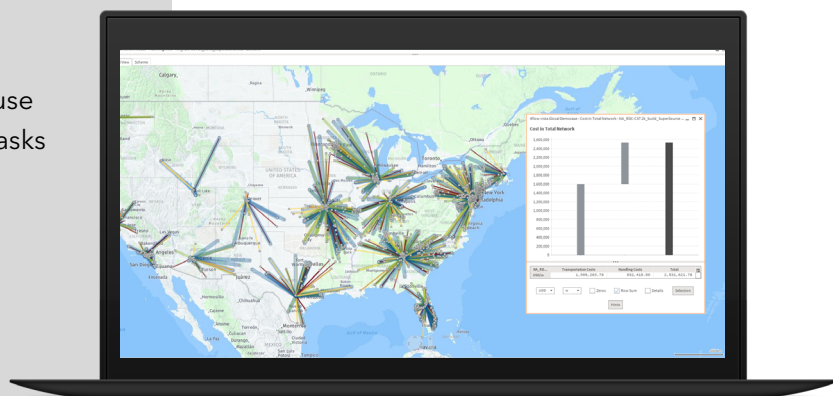

- > In-house supply chain consultancy at a discrete manufacturer located in the United States
- > Provided services including network design, network planning and network optimization
- > Need software to support their service offerings

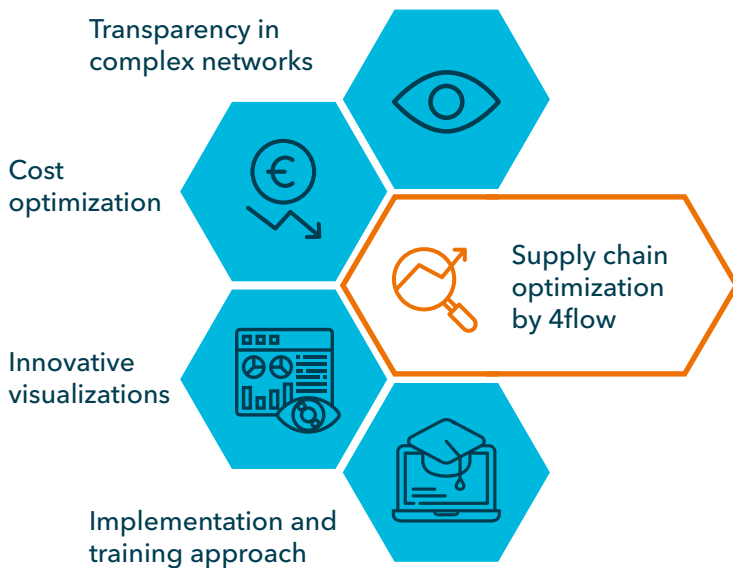

Project approach

- > Identify required 4flow vista® modules to cover services offered and topics to be analyzed
- > Train users on 4flow vista® modules for network planning, strategic transportation planning and total landed costs
- > Provide further support and training based on real-world uses cases using customer data

Outcome and benefits

- 1 Users were trained and 4flow vista® was implemented in order to improve future consulting services
- 2 Framework was established for customer's use of calculation results for network planning tasks
- 3 Calculations were improved by using optimization functions in 4flow vista®

More than ever, in-house consulting services need to achieve sustainable optimization measures for their projects. A tool that lets users easily model, visualize, analyze and optimize network structure and transportation helps overcome this challenge.
